TEACHERS TUMBLER

To the Tune of 13 to 4 at Punahou.

"Rah! Rah!
Ray! Ray! Ray!
Transport Thomas—
U. S. A!"

So yelled the leathern-lunged pedagogues at Punahou yesterday, while their ball-players exerted every effort to wrest a victory from the local Stars. The crowd which witnessed the game yesterday must have exceeded fifteen hundred and it was the biggest assembly that has invaded Punahou pasture for many a long day. The teachers were there in force and the faces which one never misses at a baseball game, be the weather wet or fine or the quality of the play good, bad or indifferent, were very much in evidence yesterday.

The visitors' nine looked well on paper; composing it were men who learned their ball in some of America's greatest schools.

The teams were as follows:

Teachers—Catcher, McGovern; pitcher, O. K. McGovern; Indiana University; first base, F. E. Force, University of Minnesota; second base, G. W. Moore (captain), Indiana University; third base, C. E. A. Walton, New Jersey Normal School; shortstop, W. Hill, Harvard; right field, R. L. Kirk, Missouri State University; center field, J. Nason, University of Minnesota; left field, A. F. Eastman, Princeton.

The Teachers' nine included several very fine individual players, but the team was greatly handicapped by never having played together before yesterday. With practice, their nine would be a very formidable one.

The Stars did not put their best team in the field. Joy, who pitched, was loaned by the Police for the occasion. A. L. Castle and A. Marcellino, both old Oahu College boys, played for the Stars for the first time, as did Tobin.

Prior to the game the members of both teams indulged in opening up exercise. The preliminary work of the Stars was clean and snappy, and made a very favorable impression with the onlookers. The Teachers, on the other hand, appeared to be unsteady, and in their warm-up showed very plainly that they had not recovered from the effects of their voyage.

The Stars were firm favorites with the crowd, and odds of 10 to 8 against the Teachers were freely laid by these gentry who cannot enjoy any kind of a contest unless they have money on it. The teachers, amid a tumult of yells from their supporters, went to bat first and faced Joy. They failed to unravel him, and a goose egg marked their efforts.

"Easy money!" roared the rooters for the home nine. "Wow, wow, wow, wow, easy money, wow, wow, wow," they chanted gleefully, when their pets compiled a brace in the first.

The visitors again failed to score in the second. Verily, Pitcher Joy was a vellum bound surprise to them. Honolulu got a couple more home, and the score at the end of the second inning read, Stars 4, Teachers 0.

McGovern, who cultivates a style of pitching peculiarly his own, had not found himself yet. In the words of the crowd, "He was a pudding."

The Thomas people were by no means disheartened by their nine's indifferent showing, but scattered verbal crumbs of comfort more lustily than ever. "Poor fellows, it is to weep," remarked a wag.

"They'll have something to write home about, anyway," retorted another sympathetic genius, compassionately. The third proved barren for both aggregations.

The Teachers seemed to get going in the fourth, and catcher McGovern created a diversion by attempting to throw to first and finding a billet for his ball in the cranium of Barney Joy, who was at bat.

"Well stopped!" shouted the spectators delightedly.

"Shoot up at 'em," shrieked a small boy, "every time you hit the cocoanut you get a good cigar."

Three runs were credited to the Pedagogues in the fifth, G. W. Moore paying the way for a couple of them by a giant hit. The Stars, not to be outdone, also registered three, making the score at the end of the fifth, Stars 9, Teachers 3.

The sixth and seventh netted one to the Teachers, and in the fatal eighth the Stars piled up four by brilliant ball, not unaided by a sprinkling of scholastic errors.

With the score 13 to 4 against them the visitors opened and closed the ninth abortively, and the game was over.

The score by innings:
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
Teachers 0 0 0 3 1 0 0 0 4
Stars 2 2 0 2 3 0 0 4 13

For the visitors Moore, Nason and Kirk particularly distinguished themselves. The team as a whole is a good one, and with practice would give Honolulu's nine a hard rub. They played the game yesterday for all they were worth, and though beaten, retired from the diamond in no wise disgraced.

The Stars played to their record. Davis at first was sloppy at times, but on the whole rendered valuable assistance to his side. Tobin showed occasional gleams of his former stick brilliancy, but was sadly out of condition. Trained, he would speedily get into the game again.

Joy pitched invincible ball at first, but was rather heavily battered toward the close of the game. "Old Pal" Gorman gave him excellent support, and was, as usual, a host in himself.

C. A. Ames, of Boston, is in the city trying to interest the local board of education in the system of vertical writing, with the hope of securing its introduction in the Honolulu schools.

The dedication of the new Kawahao Church organ takes place tonight, and a fine musical program has been prepared.
